From the original Autographs in the Possession of John Thane.

There are no authentic Portraits known of the seven Persons following, whose Autographs are in the Frontispiece.

WILLIAM DE LA POLE, Duke of Suffolk,

ONE of the prime ministers and favourites of Henry the VIth. and his Queen, said to have been too familiar with her Majesty, and to have had a hand in the murder of Humphry, Duke of Gloucester, &c. He was beheaded at Sea, in going to banishment, 1450.

ALICE, his Dutchess,

Was grand-daughter of Chaucer, the poet, the Duke was her third husband, her fecond was Thomas De Montacute Earl of Salisbury, and her first Sir — Philips. She brought the Duke a very large dowry.

SIR JOHN FASTOLFF,

Was made a Knight of the Garter for his many great exploits in the wars in France, and judicious management of the lieutenancy and government which he held in Normandy, &c. In 1440 he finally returned to England, where he shone as bright in virtue, as he had abroad in valour, living in great splendor, charity, and hospitality: he died upwards of ninety years of age, 1459.

RICHARD

RICHARD PLANTAGENET, Duke of York,

Father of Edward the IVth. and Richard the IIId. was Regent of France on the death of the great Duke of Bedford, and twice Protector of the Realm under Henry the VIth. After a variety of fortunes, he was declared by parliament, successor to the Crown, and in maintenance of his right, (being descended from the third son of Edward the IIId. whereas Henry was only from the fourth,) was slain in battle against Queen Margaret at Wakefield, 1460.

RICHARD NEVILE, Earl of Warwick,

The most powerful and beloved Nobleman of his time, called the Great, and Make-king; having dethroned Henry the VIth. he set up Edward the IVth. afterwards dethroned him, and set up Henry again; He was killed in fighting against Edward, in the battle of Barnet, 1471.

JOHN DE VERE, Earl of Oxford,

Son-in-law of the great Earl of Warwick, had a command in the battle at Barnet field; after which, being taken by Edward the IVth. he was fent prisoner to the castle of Hams, from whence, some time after, he escaped and joined the Earl of Richmond, in whose army at Bosworthfield, he was a Captain of the Archers: he died 1512.

SIR HENRY WENTWORTH,

Son of Sir Philip, by Mary, daughter of John Lord Clifford, was in the Expedition with Edward the IVth. when he demanded the reftoration of the kingdom of France; on the marriage of Edward's fecond fon, he was made a Knight of the Bath: in the reign of Henry the VIIth. he was also much in esteem, and employed as a Commissioner in raising Supplies, &c. particularly against Perkin Warbeck. His grandson, for his extraordinary courage and other abilities, was made Lord Wentworth in the 21st of Henry the VIIIth.

KING

KING HENRY the VIth.

The only child of the victorious Henry the Vth. by Catherine, daughter of Charles the VIth. of France; he was called the Prince of Priests, and was more fit for a Monk than a King. He was so weak a Prince as to be governed by every designing party that from time to time happened to be about him, to his own very great misfortunes, as well as the misery and devastation of his subjects, and the loss of nearly all the conquests made in France.—Edward the IVth. was under the cruel necessity of sacrificing him to his own safety, 1471.

KING EDWARD the IVth.

Eldest surviving son of Richard, Duke of York, was reckoned the handsomest man of his time, he made his way to the throne by his sword; when settled in the kingdom, he suffered his active and enterprizing nature, to fink into indolence and dissipation, which was sometimes accompanied by cruelty: he died 1483.

KING EDWARD the Vth.

Eldest son of Edward the IVth. by Elizabeth, Widow of Sir John Grey, was between twelve and thirteen years old when he succeeded his father, but never crowned; the ambition of his uncle Richard, Duke of Gloucester, causing him and his brother to be smothered in the Tower, when he had borne the title of King only two months and twelve days, 1483.

KING RICHARD the IIId.

The eighth and youngest son of Richard, Duke of York, made his way to the crown, by hypocrify, fraud, and murder: Notwithstanding, he was a man of such great abilities for government, as to be esteemed a good King, though so bad a man; he was killed in the battle of Bos-worth-sield, after sighting in person with the greatest courage and sury imaginable, 1485,

OHN

JOHN HOWARD, Duke of Norfolk,

A faithful adherent to the house of York, and the first Duke of his family, was a man of great courage, integrity, and address, and is said to have had no share in the cruelties of Richard III. in whose cause, and with whom he was killed, 1485.

KING HENRY the VIIth.

Descended from Catharine, widow of Henry V. by Owen Tudor, was on the day he obtained the victory over Richard III. at Bosworth-field, proclaimed King by the army, but not crowned till he renewed his promise to marry Elizabeth, the eldest daughter of Edward IV. the completion of which, united the long contending houses of York and Lancaster, to the great joy of the nation.—Henry was wise and politic, but his rigid policy, together with his jealousy of the title of the house of York, extended to cruelty and malignity, so that even his Queen did not escape it, and his great avarice in the latter end of his reign, induced him to be very oppressive to his subjects: he died 1509

MARGARET, Countess of Richmond and Derby.

Was mother of Henry VII. by the first of her three husbands, Edmund Tudor, Earl of Richmond, half brother of Henry VI. She was sole daughter and heir of John Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, grandson of John of Gaunt, fourth son of Edward III. After the death of her last husband the Earl of Derby, she engaged herself in a vow of celibacy, and was admitted into five several religious houses.—She was a woman of great piety and a celebrated foundress; at her death, she was allied to thirty Kings and Queens, besides several Princes, Dukes, Marquises, and Earls. She died about three months after her son Henry VII. 1509.

THOMAS HOWARD, Earl of Surry,

Son of John, Duke of Norfolk, was taken prisoner in the battle at Bos-worth-field, and sent to the tower, but some time after released and restored to his Earldom, and made Lord High Treasurer. In the beginning of the reign of Henry VIII. he shewed his generalship by the samous victory he gained at the battle of Flodden-field, for which he was restored to the dukedom of his father.—This great man, who was not less great in the cabinet, than in the field, died 1524.

KING

KING HENRY the VIIIth.

The fon of Henry VII. by Elizabeth of York, was not eighteen years old when he fucceeded to the crown.—He was the most accomplished Prince of his time, and unfortunately for his subjects, he knew it, for as he ripened in years, he not only made his own will a law, right or wrong, but brought them into little less than slavery, by over awing his parliaments, and depriving many of their lives and fortunes, even some of his favourites. He had six Queens, two of whom he divorced, two he beheaded, and the last but narrowly escaped the block. He died 1547.

CATHARINE, first Queen of HENRY the VIIIth.

The youngest daughter of Ferdinand, King of Arragon, by Isabella, Queen of Castile, King and Queen of Spain; at eighteen was married to Arthur, Prince of Wales, and became his widow in little more than four months; she was afterwards married to Henry VIII. and crowned with him; living in his good graces for eighteen years, before his conscience was touched with the unlawfulness of his marriage: when this, and his growing passion for Anna Bullen, occasioned her divorce 1533. She was an exemplary good woman, and suffered much on account of her separation from the King, whom she affectionately loved. She died 1536.

CATHARINE, last Queen of HENRY the VIIIth.

The eldest daughter of Sir Thomas Parr, and widow of John Nevil, Lord Latimer, was a woman of learning and great abilities: she married Henry VIII. 1543, which verified the farcasm made upon one of his tyrannical acts two years before, that he must marry none but a widow. She was a favourer of the reformation, and had like to have fallen a facrifice to it, for Henry insisted that every one should believe in all points, precisely as himself. Soon after the King's death she was married to Sir Thomas Seymour, uncle to Edward the VIth. for whom she had an affection, before her marriage with the King; her partiality in his favour was repaid by him with ill usage, she died, soon after her delivery of a daughter, not without the strongest suspicion of being poisoned by him, 1548.

THOMAS CRANMER, Arch-bishop of Canterbury,

The fon of Thomas Cranmer, Esq; of Aslakton in Nottinghamshire, was born 1489. He received his education at Jesus College, Cambridge, where he commenced a Doctor in Divinity: his great and extensive learning and other abilities, occasioned his being consulted when Henry the VIIIth. was about to divorce his Queen, Catharine of Arragon; and his opinion being that the marriage was unlawful and ought to be dissolved, he became high in favour with that monarch, who fent him to Rome and other courts concerning it, and at the death of Arch-bishop Warbam, made him Arch-bishop of Canterbury. The King had such an esteem for him, that he continued him in his favour to the last, to the no fmall mortification of his many and powerful enemies, and further honoured him, with mentioning him first as executor in his last will. During the reign of Edward the VIth. he was indefatigable in carrying on the reformation, both at home and abroad: but when Mary ascended the throne, he became a facrifice to her refentment, not for religion only, but chiefly for the active part he had taken in her mother's divorce; notwithstanding she herself owed her life to his solicitation with her father, when he had resolved on her death, for disobedience to his commands. This great and good man, who was the ornament of our church and nation, was burnt as a heretick, 1556.

THOMAS HOWARD, third Duke of Norfolk,

Son to the victorious Duke who gained the battle at Flodden-field, was made Earl of Surry for the share he had in that victory. He was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and after his father's refignation, made Treafurer and Lord High Admiral; but at length had like to have fallen a victim, (as his son had just before,) to the jealousy of Henry the VIIIth. and whose death only prevented it.—He remained a prisoner during the reign of Edward the VIth. but was released when Mary ascended the throne, and, notwithstanding he was above eighty years of age, was again seen at the head of an army, and helped to suppress Wyat's rebellion: he died 1554.

CHARLES BRANDON, Duke of Suffolk,

Son of Sir William Brandon, standard-bearer of Henry the VIIth. who was killed by the hand of Richard the IIId. at Bosworth-field, was the companion of Henry the VIIIth. in his youth, and became one of his most particular favorites.—He was a man of great courage, and distinguished himself in tilts and tournaments; after the taking of Tourney, in 1513, in which he had a great share, he was made a Duke. He married Mary, Queen Dowager of France, sister to Henry the VIIIth. whose affections he had gained before her marriage with Louis the XIIth. This deserving Nobleman, was graceful in person, valiant, humble, bountiful, and unaffected; so that he gained universal esteem. — He was a Knight of the Garter, and Knight of the Order of St. Michael, died 1545.

THOMAS

THOMAS CROMWELL, Earl of Esfex,

Was a man of mean birth, but great abilities; on his return from abroad, where he had been for improvement, he was taken into the fervice of Cardinal Wolfey, after whose fall, he was employed by Henry the VIIIth. who for his merit, knighted him in 1531, five years after created him Baron Cromwell, next year a Knight of the Garter, and two years after that, Earl of Essex.—He was of the greatest service to Henry the VIIIth. in the suppression of the monasteries, and was made his Vice-regent: this gave him the precedence of all the great officers of State; after being thus raised, he was suddenly arrested, attainted, and beheaded, without even having been brought to a trial, 1540.

KING EDWARD the VIth.

The only fon of Henry the VIIIth. by his most beloved Queen, Jane Seymour. He was only nine years and a quarter old when he succeeded his father, who, by his will, left him under the guardianship of fixteen executors, out of whom they chose one as protector, viz. Edward Seymour, after Duke of Somerset, the King's uncle: unhappily for the nation, the ambition of some, and the prejudice of party in others, rendered this short reign full of trouble, and an easy prey to the bigotry of the next successor.—This young King was esteemed for his age, the most sensible, learned, accomplished, and pious of any then living; he died in a decline, not without some suspicion of soul play, 1553.

JOHN ALASCO,

A noble Polander, before he became a Protestant, was a Bishop of the church of Rome, but soon after his reform, was obliged to leave his country, from whence he went and settled at Embden, in East Friesland, where he was chose by the Protestants, their Pastor; sometime after, on account of their religion, they were forced to fly thence, when they came to England, and were kindly received by Edward VI. who granted them the church in Austin-friars: on the accession of Mary they were ordered to leave this kingdom, hence they retired to Denmark, where they dispersed, and Alasco went to Francsort, and established a church; from thence he was called to his own country, by letters signed by upwards of forty of the nobility: the King, his nephew, consulted him in all weighty matters, knowing him to be a man of great piety, parts, and learning: he died 1560.

QUEEN

QUEEN MARY,

Daughter of Henry VIII. by Catharine of Aragon, his first Queen, whom he divorced, did not immediately come to the Throne, Lady Jane Gray having been proclaimed according to the will of Edward VI. Mary was not at all beloved, and perhaps never would have ascended it, had not the universal hatred to the Duke of Northumberland, Lady Jane's Father-in-law, made the nation think it better to be under her, than his tyranny and oppression; for he was, and doubtless would have continued at the head of affairs, if the Lady Jane had succeeded. Mary was a woman of a weak understanding, a melancholy, obstinate and unrelenting temper; which, together with a blind zeal for her religion, and ill advisers, rendered her short reign, the most horrid and cruel, on account of religion, that was ever known in this country: she died 1558.

PHILIP II. King of Spain,

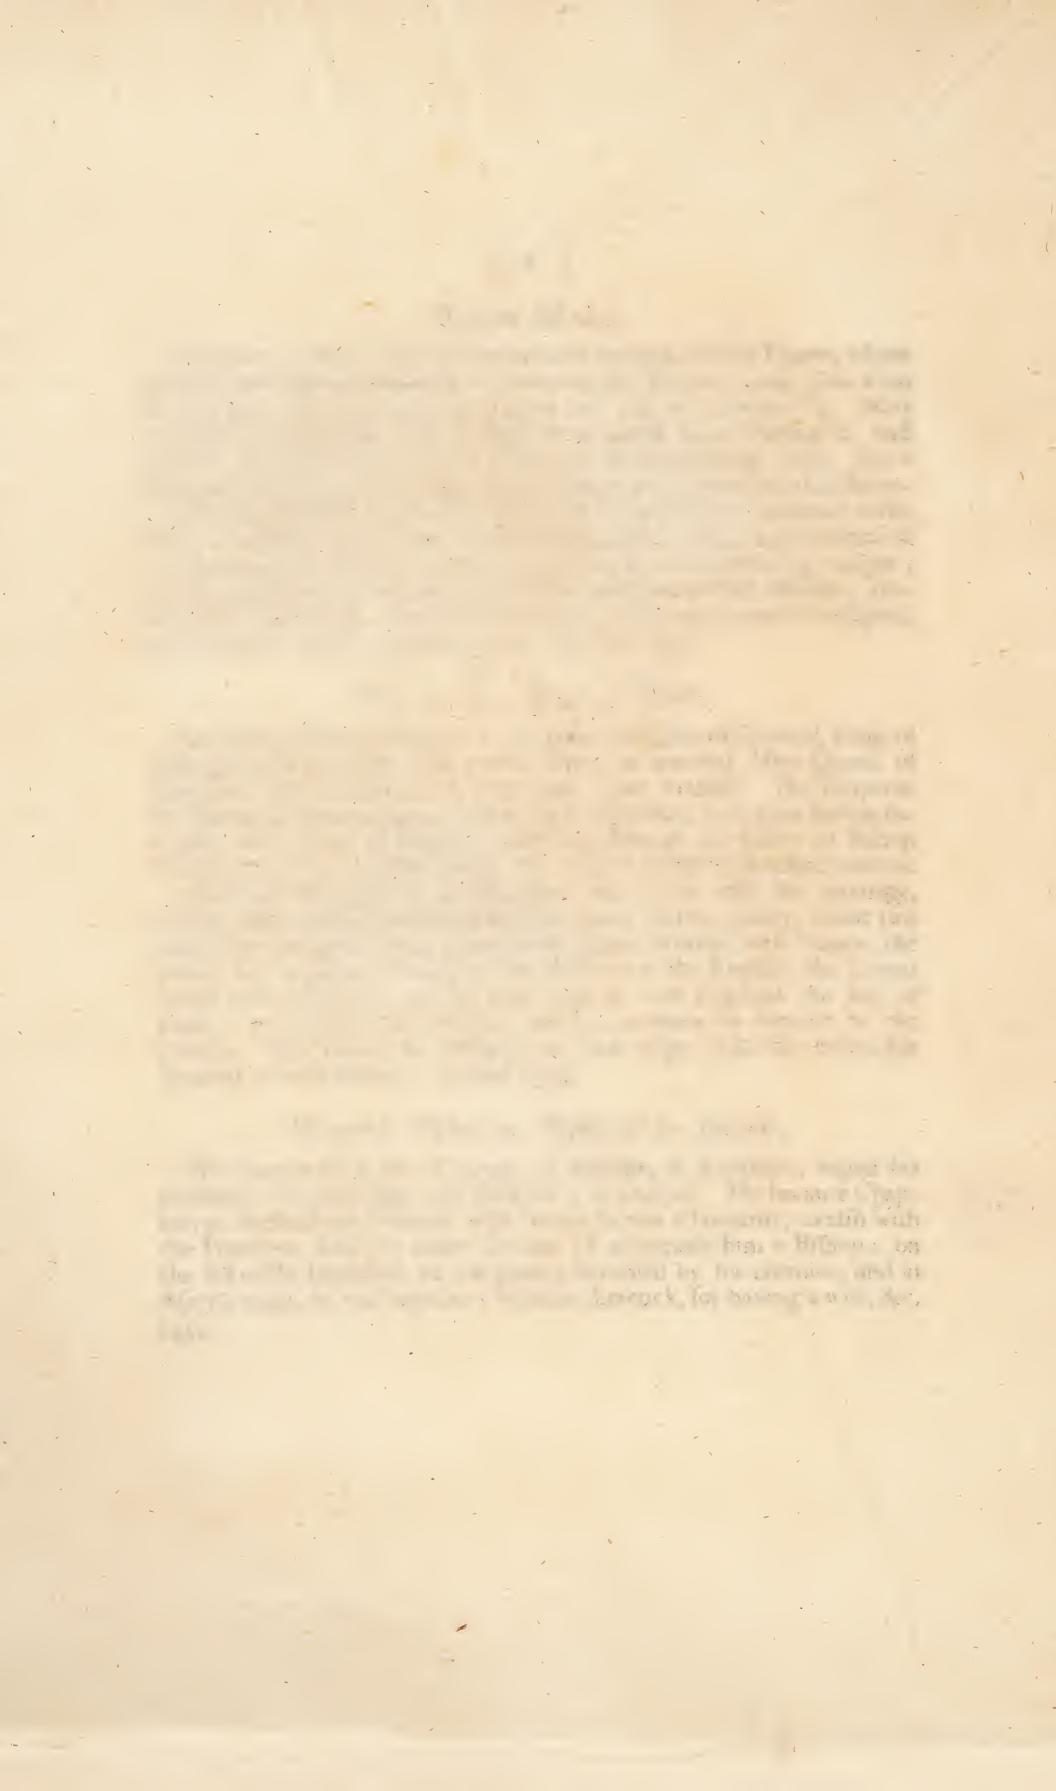

Son of the Emperor Charles V. by Isabel, daughter of Emanuel, King of Portugal, was not eight and twenty when he married Mary Queen of England, who was above ten years older than himself. The Emperor by procuring this marriage, which, as it happened, only gave his son the empty title of King of England, cost him, through the policy of Bishop Gardiner, to bribe the Parliament, &c. twelve hundred thousand crowns.

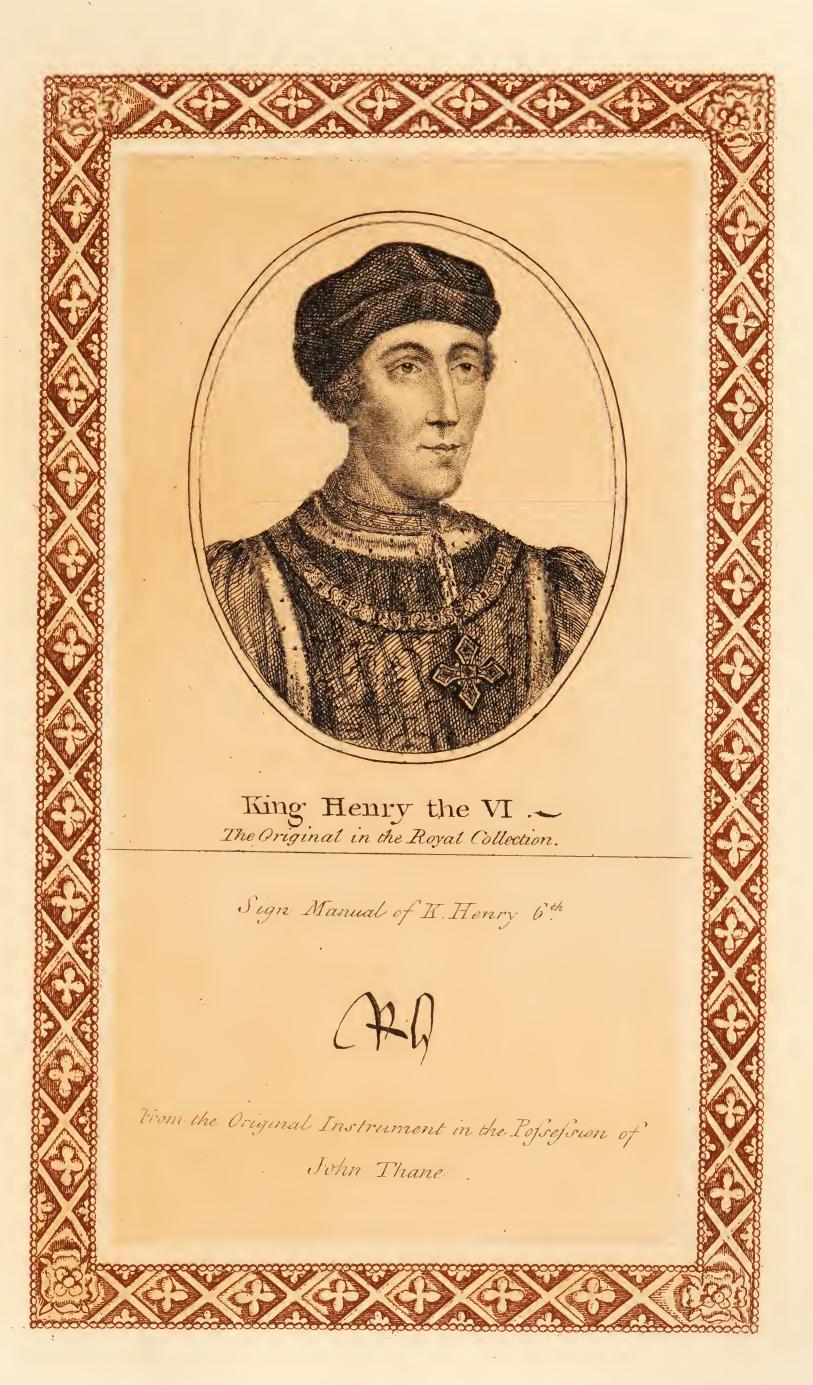

Philip left the Queen in a little more than a year after his marriage, and probably would never have feen her more, had not policy, about two years after brought him, to perfuade the Queen to break with France; the which, tho' it gained Philip, by the affiftance of the English, the famous battle of St. Quintin; yet the next year it cost England the key of France, our ancient City of Calais, which was taken by surprise by the French. The success of Philip in the next reign, with his invincible Armada is well known: he died 1594.

ROBERT FERRAR, Bishop of St. Davids,

Was born within the Vicarage of Halifax, in Yorkshire, began his education at Cambridge, and finished it at Oxford. He became Chaplain to Archbishop Cranmer, with whom he was a favourite, as also with the Protector Somerset, under Edward VI. who made him a Bishop: on the fall of the Protector, he was greatly harrassed by his enemies; and in Mary's reign, he was burnt as a lutheran heretick, for having a wife, &c. 1555.
